Sarah Dilley

Sarah Dilley (Indiana) -- Sarah grew up in Indiana and traveled south to attend Emory University. At Emory she was a thrower on the varsity track team and president of her sorority before graduating with a BA in psychology. She then worked for a year in Atlanta on maternal substance abuse research and prevention before returning home to attend medical school. At IUSM, Sarah was co-founder of Med Students for Choice and is a member of AOA. She spent two months in Eldoret, Kenya working at the Riley Mother-Baby Hospital, and is an Albert Schweitzer Fellow with a project focusing on homeless women's healthcare. She also pursued an MPH at the Harvard School of Public Health after her third year, where she evaluated the group prenatal care program at a community health center in south Boston. Sarah loves to do yoga, bake, ski and make jewelry, and she's always looking for someone to go see live music with!
