7. During the procedure on Patient S.R., Respondent noted omentum (a fold of peritoneum extending from the stomach to adjacent abdominal organs) in the suction curette, which represented a uterine perforation.

8. Respondent stopped the procedure and transferred Patient S.R. to Plantation General Hospital for treatment.

9. At Plantation General Hospital, on October 13, 2000, a general surgeon performed an exploratory laparotomy (an operation to open the abdomen to rule out bowel injury), repair of uterine laceration, and a partial omentectomy (excision of the membrane that encloses the bowels) of Patient S.R.
