

Ms. Schreiber And Mr. Meisel

Published: May 9, 1999

Original article found online at: <http://www.nytimes.com/1999/05/09/style/ms-schreiber-and-mr-meisel.html>

Courtney Anne Schreiber, a daughter of Pamela Schreiber and Dr. Alan Schreiber of Philadelphia, was married at her parents' house last evening to Zachary Franklin Meisel, a son of Allene Fisch and Dr. Frederick Meisel, both of Brookline, Mass. Rabbi Julie Greenberg officiated.

The couple, who graduated from Columbia University, he cum laude, are to receive medical degrees later this month, the bride from New York University and the bridegroom from Johns Hopkins University. They will begin residencies next month at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, she in obstetrics and gynecology and he in emergency medicine.

The bride, 28, is keeping her name. Her father is a professor of medicine and the assistant dean for research at Penn. Her mother is the vice president for human resources and investor relations at Resource America, a diversified financial services company in Philadelphia.

Mr. Meisel, 27, also received a master's degree in public health from Johns Hopkins. His mother is a consultant in the Boston office of Ceridian, an employee-benefits consulting company. His father, a child psychiatrist, practices in Cambridge, Mass., and is an instructor in child psychiatry at Harvard University.