Dr Sarah Miller is a faculty physician and family planning specialist at the Walton Family Health Center, the Institute's Bronx residency training site. She is part of the team that teaches the integration of full-spectrum family planning services into the primary care setting. She works closely with residents and fellows providing specialized procedure sessions for our patients. Her professional interests include: reproductive health care and advocacy, office-based procedural care, colposcopy, travel medicine, and no-scalpel vasectomy. Her current passion is working to enhance male involvement in family planning. She recently received her Brown Belt in Seido Karate.
