

<http://www.reproductiveaccess.org/2015/12/introducing-the-reproductive-health-and-advocacy-fellows/>

Danit Brahver, MD

“I grew up in northern New Jersey in the suburbs of New York City, attended college in Pennsylvania, and returned to my home state for medical school at Rutgers University Robert Wood Johnson Medical School in Camden, NJ. The residency match landed me in Boston at the Tufts University Family Medicine Residency program, and I am ecstatic to be the first fellow at Tufts piloting the Massachusetts arm of the Reproductive Health Care and Advocacy Fellowship! My passion for family medicine, underserved care, and reproductive health provision is rooted deeply in reproductive justice and social equity (Thanks, Mom!). I chose to do the RHAP fellowship to bolster my procedural skills, to gain real comfort in teaching residents, and to learn the nuts and bolts of family planning practice integration. After graduation, I hope to join a family medicine residency program in need of a reproductive health trainer to continue teaching and providing comprehensive women’s health services in a shortage area.”