About Dr. Cohen

Dr. Rebecca Cohen began her medical career by attending undergraduate and medical school at Ohio State University. After graduating from medical school in 2010, Dr. Cohen completed her internship at Emory University and residency at University of Illinois at Chicago. She then went on to complete a fellowship in family planning and a master's degree in public health and epidemiology at the University of Colorado School of Public Health.

Dr. Cohen chose obstetrics and gynecology as her medical specialty because she is passionate about helping women through their reproductive years. Having the ability to support women during important decisions, whether it be birth control or pregnancy, is a true honor for Dr. Cohen.

Women often feel isolated because reproductive health is not talked about openly. Dr. Cohen strives to remove this stigma by taking time to ensure that each patient feels comfortable with her care and that all concerns are addressed.

When Dr. Cohen is not caring for her patients, she enjoys knitting, cooking and spending time with her husband and dogs.

Did you know?

When it comes to caring for patients, Dr. Cohen is compassionate and nonjudgmental. She believes that each of her patients is unique, but wants them to know that they are not alone.
