

Katie McHugh, MD

Katie McHugh, MD, is an obstetrician gynecologist at Indiana University in Indianapolis. She attended the University of Louisville as an undergraduate, and her medical career started at the University of Kentucky. She graduated from Indiana University School of Medicine and the Indiana University OB/GYN residency program.

During the course of her medical training, she received numerous awards for both teaching and research achievements, including top honors and publications in minimally invasive gynecologic surgery and excellence in teaching. However, she is proudest to be a recipient of the Sunshine Award, which recognized her consistently positive and cheerful attitude, as well as the Gold Humanism Award, honoring those with a humanistic approach to their patients.

Katie lives in Indianapolis, IN, with her husband, two children, and variety of pets. She enjoys singing in her church's choir, attending her children's various activities, and a healthy, active lifestyle with her family.
