

This article is available to subscribers. Subscribe now. Already have an account? Sign in

Perspective

FREE PREVIEW

Recognizing Conscience in Abortion Provision

Lisa H. Harris, M.D., Ph.D.

September 13, 2012

N Engl J Med 2012; 367:981-983

DOI: 10.1056/NEJMp1206253

The exercise of conscience in health care is generally considered synonymous with refusal to participate in contested medical services, especially abortion. This depiction neglects the fact that the provision of abortion care is also conscience-based.

Continue reading this article

SELECT AN OPTION BELOW:

Create your account to get 3 free subscriber-only articles each month.

GET FREE ACCESS NOW

SUBSCRIBE FOR FULL ACCESS

Already have an account?

SIGN IN

Print subscriber?

ACTIVATE YOUR ONLINE ACCESS.

Create your account for 3 FREE subscriber-only articles each month. Get Free Access Now.

Are you a member of an institution such as a university or hospital?

Learn more about Institutional Access

Funding and Disclosures

Disclosure forms provided by the author are available with the full text of this article at NEJM.org.

Author Affiliations

From the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology, the Department of Women's Studies, the Center for Bioethics and Social Sciences in Medicine, and the Program for Sexual Rights and Reproductive Justice, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

Create your account for 3 FREE subscriber-only articles each month. Get Free Access Now.