

- Current Conditions -
Current Temp
High Temp
Low Temp

Jobs | Homes | Rentals | Autos | Biz List | Stuff for Sale | NIE | Daily Deals | Shopping/Coupons | Obituaries | Pets | Place an Ad |

Get Connected

Search for:  in All

Sunday, March 24, 2013

Home News Sports Business Editorial Lifestyle Enjoy.Ohio.com Blogs Multimedia UPublish MyCommunities

Ohio.com > News > Local News >

Events Calendar

February 2020							Visit Zvents.com
Su	Mo	Tu	We	Th	Fr	Sa
26	27	28	29	30	31	1
2	3	4	5	6	7	8
9	10	11	12	13	14	15
16	17	18	19	20	21	22
23	24	25	26	27	28	29
1	2	3	4	5	6	7

EVENT SEARCH:

==> Submit an Event

Most Read Stories

24 hrs 7 days

- Browns owner Jimmy Haslam pleased with offseason moves but doesn't expect instant success
  - West Akron woman recalls Wright house that never was
  - Church coffeehouse becoming a hot spot in the community
  - Jason Lloyd: Cavs can create opportunity for two max contracts in summer of 2014
  - Drive-by debate vents opinions about gun control
  - Police blotter — March 24
  - Suspect arrested in hit-skip accident that injured Akron kindergartner
  - Sheldon Ocker: Indians' attendance in Arizona doesn't put spring in step
  - Marla Ridenour: Zips' bleak ending shouldn't obscure promising future
  - Division II boys basketball state final / Bishop Watterson 55, St. V-M 52: Irish's rally not enough
- Read More >>

MORE IN NEWS...

Church coffeehouse becoming a hot spot in

Mother delivers healthy baby and lawsuit after unsuccessful abortion

By Phil Trexler
Beacon Journal staff writer

Published: March 15, 2013 - 09:25 AM | Updated: March 15, 2013 - 12:49 PM

Ariel Knights, who did not want to be photographed, and her Attorney James J. Gutbrod talk about the malpractice lawsuit they have against the Akron Women's Medical Group. (Mike Cardew/Akron Beacon Journal) Ariel Knights, who did not want to be photographed, and her Attorney James J. Gutbrod talk about the malpractice lawsuit they have against the Akron Women's Medical Group. (Mike Cardew/Akron Beacon Journal)

View More Photos >>

Inside an Akron abortion clinic was not where Ariel Knights wanted to be.

But after much anguish, she found herself walking through those clinic doors, joining a sea of women filling dozens of chairs stacking the waiting room.

"Every seat was full. People were standing," she said. "It was pretty much like a slaughterhouse; it was like OK, next, next."

When her name was called that March morning a year ago, she walked into a cramped room and climbed onto a table, positioning her lower body above a trash bag. When the doctor finished, Knights, still woozy from being sedated, was handed her things and shown the door.

Looking back on that day, Knights, the mother of a preschool-age son, said she did what she felt needed to be done to protect herself and her family. Afflicted with uterus didelphys, going through with this new pregnancy could put the 22-year-old woman's life at risk, doctors told her.

"It was a decision I made because my life was in danger," she said. "I was put in jeopardy. And I have a son that I am supposed to be taking care of."

A week after the clinic visit, Knights found herself in an ER where she would hear the news: She was still pregnant. About seven months later, she gave birth to a healthy 6-pound girl.

Knights doesn't know what happened during the abortion procedure performed at the Akron Women's Medical Group. She's hoping for an answer as her malpractice lawsuit against the clinic makes its way through Summit County Common Pleas Court.

She is seeking unspecified damages for pain and suffering and emotional distress. The lawsuit was filed March 4 and has been assigned to Judge Amy Corrigan Jones.

Carol Westfall, the clinic's director, declined comment when contacted by phone this week.

Jim Gutbrod, an Akron attorney representing Knights, said the lawsuit is a malpractice claim that alleges the clinic and its doctor deviated from acceptable standard care. At the same time, Gutbrod, who is opposed to abortions for any reason, said he hopes the lawsuit serves as the impetus for change.

"From Ariel's description, you can see how poorly the clinic is run and how different it is from any other medical procedure that's done in our country," he said. "The way they do things is horrendous."

Share this story on Facebook and Twitter

Recently Commented Stories

- Drive-by debate vents opinions about gun control - Local - Ohio
112 comments · 1 hour ago
- In choosing a charter school, a free bus ride sometimes more important than academic quality - News - Ohio
14 comments · 3 minutes ago
- Letters to the editor - March 25 - VOP - Ohio
13 comments · 22 minutes ago
- Suspect arrested in hit-skip accident that injured Akron kindergartner - Break News - Ohio
127 comments · 4 hours ago
- Union protesters clash with non-union workers at Nothfield Park - Break News - Ohio
113 comments · 18 hours ago
- NCAA tournament | Ohio State 78, Iowa State 75: Craft makes last-second shot to advance - Top Stories - Ohio
4 comments · 41 minutes ago
- Letters to the editor - March 24 - VOP - Ohio
46 comments · 1 hour ago

the community

West Akron woman recalls Wright house that never was

Drive-by debate vents opinions about gun control

Division II boys basketball state final / Bishop Watterson 55, St. V-M 52: Irish's rally not enough

Browns owner Jimmy Haslam pleased with offseason moves but doesn't expect instant success

Bob Dyer: Amid March Madness, some real sanity

Bemsen consumer venture looking for new investors

Housing, commercial construction improves in Akron area

Analysis: Budget balance is in eye of the beholder Celebrations

Genetic condition

Knights, who is engaged to be married and works as a dental lab technician, said she learned she had uterine didelphys during the pregnancy of her son. The genetic condition results in a double uterus with individual cervixes.

She said her son was carried in the left uterus, which was healthy enough to carry the fetus to a near full-term pregnancy without complications and a C-section birth.

In her second pregnancy, an exam in early February 2012 showed the fetus was located in the right uterus, which her doctor told her was unstable and put her pregnancy and her life at risk. She had little choice, she said, but to opt for an abortion.

"It was a decision made because my life was in jeopardy. End of story. Point blank, that's it," she said.

After leaving the abortion clinic in Akron, Knights thought her pregnancy was over. She is still unsure how or why the abortion failed. An ultrasound was performed twice before the procedure. She is unsure if one was done afterward.

She is also unsure why the abortion clinic doctor believed the procedure was complete and what, if anything, was removed from her body.

"[The doctor] said, 'All right, everything's good and clear, everything went well,'" she recalled.

Days afterward, however, she said she was constantly ill and in pain. After about a week that included a visit to her family doctor, she went to an ER, where she was seen by an obstetric triage doctor.

An internal ultrasound was performed.

"And the look on [the doctor's] face when he found out, he was like, 'Oh my goodness, honey, you're still pregnant,'" she said. "My fiance and I, we both were kind of in shock."

She contacted the Akron abortion clinic and was told she could visit their Cleveland-area office. She declined.

Instead, she contacted another abortion clinic, which told her, according to the lawsuit, it would not treat her for "somebody else's mistake."

It was then, she said, that she and her fiance decided to forge ahead with the pregnancy. What followed were multiple trips to the ER, four hospital admissions that lasted three to five days, and biweekly visits with a doctor who specializes in high-risk pregnancies. The visits always included an ultrasound exam, she said.

The concern, she said, was that the weakened uterus carrying her child would fail. The fear never left her during her pregnancy.

"I can't explain how I felt. It was just a sense of being overwhelmed, wondering what happened to the baby, wondering what's happening to me and what did [the clinic] think they did," she said. "It was just constant stress."

Birth of daughter

On Sept. 20, she gave birth to her daughter. Again, a C-section was performed to deliver her child, a 6-pound, 20-inch girl. Although the child was in neonatal intensive care for breathing problems, the baby is now healthy.

Knights, who said her medical condition makes her pro-choice in the abortion debate, hopes her lawsuit will prompt better treatment for other women seeking the procedure.

In the meantime, she said she is blessed with a beautiful child she considers her "miracle baby."

The irony of the failed abortion, however, is not lost.

"That's a sore subject to think about," she said as she became visibly emotional. "I mean, it's just hard, thinking she's here and thinking, if they would have done their job. ... It's just something I don't like to think about."

Phil Trexler can be reached at 330-996-3717 or ptrexler@thebeaconjournal.com. He can be followed on Twitter at www.twitter.com/PhilTrexler.

• Busch avoids Hamlin-Logano wreck in Fontana finish - Sports - Ohio

1 comment · 33 minutes ago

• Both sides of gun debate make public appeals - News - Ohio

3 comments · 36 minutes ago

• School bus fleet ages and grows more costly to maintain as state shifts burden to local taxpayers - News - Ohio

53 comments · 43 minutes ago

Powered by Disqus

Cleveland Browns

Free-agent outside linebacker Victor Butler to visit Browns

Beer Blog

Fat Head's Headstrong Fest tonight, Saturday

Cleveland Cavaliers

Final thoughts: Heat 98, Cavs 95

Heldenfiles

The Latest "Idol" Chat With Malcolm X Abram - 2:27 PM

On Sports Media

Peter King, SI developing football-only writing site

Varsity Letters

Video analysis of St. Vincent-St. Mary's loss in state final - 7:02 AM

University of Akron Zips

Marla Ridenour: In second half, Keith Dambrot deserved better from his best friend

Ohio State Buckeye Blogging

Ohio State survives against Iowa State, advances to Sweet Sixteen - 2:44 PM

Tribe Matters

Dice-K released - 8:29 PM

Pets

Spring break camp at Cleveland Zoo

Story tools

Email

Email Print Reprint Reprint Popular Most Popular Subscribe

Share this story

Kent State Golden Flashes

Flashes season ends in second round of CIT with 73-59 loss to host Loyola-Md.
- 5:54 PM

Marla Ridenour on Sports

Marla Ridenour: In second half, Keith Dambrot deserved better from his best friend

Sports Editor's Desk

President Obama picks NCAA Tournament, favors Buckeyes to make deep run

Ohio politics

New online tool makes it easier for voters to check their registrations

All Da King's Men

Rare Democrat Sighting In Senate

Mass Destruction

Extreme Right & Centrist...But No Airing Of Liberal Budget

Akron Aeros

Aeros announce promotional schedule for Canal Park

Friends, food and fun in the kitchen

Cincy chips being recalled

Ohio Utica Shale

Links between U.S. economy, electricity are changing

Sound Check

John Mayer coming to Blossom in August

Close to Home

Online shop features looks from This Old House magazine

Government efficiency

Check out Civic Commons

America Today - Civility Series

Who passes the civility test?

Inside Ohio.com

LOCAL HISTORY