Robin Wallace

Robin Wallace, MD, is a board certified family physician and a current fellow in family planning at the University of California, San Francisco. While in medical school at the University of North Carolina, and in residency at Santa Rosa Family Medicine, Robin made several trips to Central and South America to work in clinics and begin learning about the challenges and rewards of international healthcare. After three years of working with the diverse and underserved patient population in the San Francisco Department of Public Health Community Health Network, Robin was able to make her first trip to Malawi to begin collaborations with colleagues at WAM and the Baylor International Pediatric AIDS Initiative. With support of the Family Planning Fellowship, whose core mission includes the advancement of comprehensive family planning care internationally, she looks forward to continuing projects with WAM focused on education and access to long-acting reversible contraceptive methods in Malawi.
