

The Utah Women's Health Center was founded as a professional medical corporation on Feb. 18, 1974 by two Board Certified physicians of obstetrics and gynecology, Dr. Grant P. Bagley and Dr. David A. Hansen. The specialized reproductive health services provided by the Clinic filled a critical need for woman in crisis situations who had previously been forced to travel out-of-state to obtain desired medical services.

In 1980, the partners purchased land and constructed their own building. The organization remains today on this site at 515 South 400 East. The Clinic is now known as the Utah Woman's Clinic; Dr. Madhuri A. Shah joined the facility in 1979 and has become one of Salt Lake City's most respected female gynecologists. Dr. Madhuri Shah is now the medical director and owner of the Utah Women's Clinic. Physician Dr. David Turok a well-known physician locally at various clinics and hospitals such as The Community Health Center and University of Utah hospitals joined Dr. Shah in 2004. Physicians Dr. Janet Jacobson and Dr. Amna Durmish are the latest additions to the clinic's professional and caring staff.

In addition to providing 1st and 2nd trimester abortions, the clinic offers pregnancy testing, pregnancy alternatives and problem pregnancy counseling.

Taken from former clinic website: utahwomensclinic.com

Clinic is closed, and website is now owned by GoDaddy.com.

See <http://abortiondocs.org/clinic/surgical/631/> for more info on closed abortion clinic.