I've seen the posts. I don't want to stay quiet anymore. I'm well in my 50's today but the memories are that of just yesterday. I was young, and of all my mistakes, this one haunts me to this day. I was just a young girl, I was in my early 20's, in fact I was only about 21 years old. Pretty, vibrant, a promising career as an art teacher, and the hottest boy from campus. That hit boy didn't last one hour past the news I told him that day. I was pregnant. Cutting the initial drama out of my story, it was all very painful, from beginning to... well, there really hasn't been an end yet. My mither, at that time, took me to see Dr. Robert Kast at Dadeland Center. It wasn't anything it look at, but it was the 80's back then, things were a little different. Dr. Kast was recommended to my mither by a close friend of hers.

I still remember the smell of the room I was taken to. I remember all the noises, and I remember all the girls in there. Like an assembly line of broken dreams. I kept telling myself, this was the right move, this was the right thing for me to do. I went through with the operation and felt horrible after it was supposedly finished. I wanted to put it all behind me but I couldn't, this was just the beginning. That night it hurst so badly all I could do was roll around and moan in pain. My mither called the doctor for me who told her to just give me more Tylenol and sleep, that I would feel better in the morning. I didn't make it to morning. That night I was rushed to the emergency room where the remaining fetus had to be removed. A head and an appendage remained inside my body after the abortion procedure with Dr. Kast. When confronted with the evidence from the hospital, he commented that the body should have naturally expelled the remains naturally. My family and I pursued the issue, but justice certainly was nit received that day. He still practices today. With what is "seemingly" a perfectly fine doctor's reputation.

There was severe damage to my uterus and lining that I have never been able to have children of my own. Whether it was mental or physical, I never bore my own child. Thankfully, my husband of 15 years has a beautiful daughter who considers me "Mom". My life worked out, but my pain has yet to subside. I wish nithing more than to make ithers aware of Kast's abilities, or lack their of. Anyone I could save from having to live with the nightmares and recollections I do, is worth it.

He should NOT have his license in good standing, or at all.

It sounds like you should have had the procedure done sooner. There are associated risks with the procedure and are not necessarily the fault of the doctor.

I am sure the last person that made a comment "ms.nirpl" did not mean to come across as an a% h^#e. I am sure we all have stong feelings for what you went through and none of us can really understand. My prayers go out to all that have to deal with a doctor like that.

Baby killer.

My sentiments exactly as Mr. Brockman put it. This is a very intense subject for most, and a very hard decision for all. I'm so sorry you had to go through something like this. In the end it seems as though you were able to move on with your life and turn things around, however, a doctor should not be so callous. I've NEVER heard of a doctor leaving remains and then claiming the body is supposed to naturally expel it. That's just nonsense and him covering his 'you know what'. In fact there are numerous articles and stories written about the dangers of bad doctors who are not thorough enough when performing operations and ones such as this exactly.

OMGoodness! I didn't see what Brockman wrote, it didn't show up earlier!!! I was AGREEING with MKSTITCH and NOT Brockman, how dare you write something so hurtful.

All this sympathy for the OP...none for the innocent baby that was brutally murdered.

Peter, your comment is way out of line. Cease or you will be reported.

@ mkstitch - you are the one who comes across as an asshole here. I see nothing wrong with ms. nirple's comment. Are you claiming to "hear" tone on the internet? Piss off. What exactly is your experience and knowledge of abortions mk? Especially in the 80's

4th of Nov, 2011 by Justice4balls -18 Votes

Obviously you do, otherwise you wouldn't be commenting about it jerkoff!

4th of Nov, 2011 by ms.nirple +15 Votes

For the record mkstitch ~ My response was from a clinical perspective and based on fact. There was no emotion one way or the other in my comment.

The OP's complaint really has to do more with her own sense of guilt. Nothing she wrote is medically uncommon, especially in that era, no matter how good of a doctor you are. She was an adult, and made the choice to abort.

Amber, unfortunately these are very nasty people that trash most of the reviews. Notice they didn't comment on Brockmans comments, which was the most dispicable out of all of them.

There is excruciating pain after the procedure regardless, even if the tissue is completely removed. That is why there is the option for painkillers these days. It is also strongly recommended to have a D&C; performed to ensure all tissue has been expelled, no matter how small the fetus was. By the time a fetus has developed a head and appendages, that's a little late in the game, and could lead to more complications.

mkstitch is an ass as well as medically ignorant, and Amber is medically ignorant, Justice4balls has nothing worthwhile to add to the discussion, and Peter B. - was that really necessary?

Op- you are still feeling guilty about the abortion. Seek help.

Everyone else - excellent factual input.

Like your comment really means anything. Just another troll.

oooh that was really sexy, say that again!!

4th of Nov, 2011 by Peter Brockman -1 Votes

ILike- who appointed you to judge what is and what isn't "necessary" ? One could just as easily ask if your presence on this board is "necessary." Again, I stand by my comments.

@ peter - The sme person who appointed you. I thought about this "complaint" a little more after all of our knee jerk reactions and now realize it is a fake troll complaint. Ask any doctor, nurse, or therapist and they will tell you the same, this post is BS.
