Specialties

- Obstetrician and Gynecologist

An obstetrician (OB) is a physician specializing in pregnancy, childbirth, and the care that follows. A gynecologist (GYN) specializes in the health, diagnosis, and treatment of the female reproductive system. Training for these specialties often overlap, and many doctors are experts in both (OB/GYN). OB/GYNs manage all aspects of women's health involving the reproductive system through medical and surgical means.

- Resident

A resident physician is a doctor who has completed medical school and is training to specialize in a specific area of medicine, such as surgery, pediatrics, or oncology. This three to seven year period of postgraduate training is supervised by attending physicians. After completing a residency, doctors take examinations to qualify for specialist board certification. Residents are licensed medical doctors with the appropriate degree and license to practice, but they report to a board certified "attending" doctor. While they cannot admit patients, they can play a key role in providing care.

CareDash updates insurance information from a variety of sources including:

- National resources such as Center for Consumer Information and Insurance Oversight (CCIIO) from Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS)
- Office managers for the provider
- Third-party partners that represent the provider to CareDash

This section shows the financial relationships between doctors and pharmaceutical and medical device companies.

The U.S. government collects extensive records about these relationships. Some examples include:

- Consulting fees that companies pay to doctors, to get their input about their products and research
- Companies paying doctors to speak about their products at conferences
- Companies taking doctors out to dinner to tell them about a new drug or medical device
- Companies paying for travel, hotel rooms, and food at medical conferences

The U.S. government collects and publishes these records due to concerns about conflicts of interest. However, CareDash does not believe that these transfers of value necessarily mean a doctor is ethically compromised. Eating sponsored food at conferences and speaking on behalf of pharmaceutical companies are not the same thing. Further, we believe that there are doctors who have success with companies' products, get paid to speak about them, and are still foremost devoted to successful patient outcomes.

Therefore, in addition to showing the payments information, we provide some context, such as the median amount for doctors of that specialty, to help users assess potential conflicts of interest. We encourage users to discuss this information with their doctors.

Data in this section is calculated using Open Payments data, collected by Medicare as part of the Affordable Care Act. This data contains detailed records about payments and other transfers of value from pharmaceutical and medical device companies to doctors.

Although the Open Payments program is administered by Medicare, it covers almost all doctors in the United States, including those who do not accept Medicare insurance.
