Funding Postabortal Contraception for Low-Income Women in California

Jennifer Salcedo, MD, MPH and Andrea Sorenson, BA

UCLA Luskin School of Public Affairs
April 26, 2012

Disclaimer: This report was prepared in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the Master in Public Policy degree in the Department of Public Policy at the University of California, Los Angeles. It was prepared at the direction of the Department and of the UCSF Bioby Center for Global Reproductive Health. The views expressed herein are those of the authors and not necessarily those of the Department, the UCLA Luskin School of Public Affairs, UCLA as a whole, or the UCSF Bioby Center for Global Reproductive Health.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Many individuals contributed to the content of this report. We would like to thank our Applied Policy Project advisor, Mark Peterson, Professor of Public Policy and Political Science at the UCLA Luskin School of Public Affairs, for his guidance and painstaking review of more drafts than we remember. We are also grateful for the advice of Rob Jensen, Associate Professor of Public Policy, and Mark Kleiman, Professor of Public Policy, for their assistance in reviewing our decision model and its assumptions.

In addition, numerous individuals have been kind enough to share their valuable expertise on issues ranging from Markov modeling, the complexities of the Medi-Cal system, and administrative law, to the Affordable Care Act.
