Planned Parenthood of Delaware's Wilmington clinic performed "meat-market style assembly line" abortions and put patients at risk for infection and other serious medical problems by neglecting proper standards of care, two former clinic nurses told a packed Senate hearing Wednesday.

Meanwhile, state officials released a list of more than a dozen violations found - and subsequently addressed - during a recent investigation triggered by several emergencies at the Shipley Street clinic, in which patients were transported by ambulance to a hospital.

And the Division of Professional ...
