About

I'm a family physician passionate about addressing health disparities in historically marginalized and stigmatized communities, particularly in an urban setting, through high quality medical care, practice innovation, public health research, and legislative advocacy. I completed my undergraduate studies at Harvard College and obtained my MD and MPH degrees from Tufts University School of Medicine. I completed my residency training at the Lawrence Family Medicine Residency where I focused on HIV Primary Care. I am currently a Core Faculty Member in the Lawrence Family Medicine Residency where I am one of the Curriculum Coordinators for the Adult Inpatient Medicine Experience as well as the Curriculum Coordinator for the Group Medical Visit Program and the Transgender Medicine Program.

My clinical interests, in addition to HIV, include primary care management of viral hepatitis, latent tuberculosis, transgender health, women's reproductive health, group medical visit, type 2 diabetes mellitus, inpatient adult medicine, obstetrical care, and preventive medicine.
