

Soda Soap

Dispatches from New Orleans and Sierra Leone

About & Why Soda Soap?

Sean Gadye Trafficante is from Portland, OR and New Orleans, LA. He is a burgeoning family doctor whose areas of medical interest include health promotion and disease prevention, equal access to care, patient education and empowerment. He has worked and volunteered at a variety of clinics and community health programs in New Orleans.

Beginning August 2010, Sean will be stationed at the Kenema Government Hospital in Kenema, Sierra Leone as a part of a collaboration between Doctors for Global Health and Action Plus. The latter is a Sierra Leonian NGO committed to improving women's health with a focus on the prevention of gender-based and domestic violence.

Sean is truly in his element while cruising on his bicycle, strolling around the bayou, reading at home or drumming. His interest in international public health emerged through study of music of the African Diaspora.

Why Soda Soap?

"We should not learn to forget what we can make ourselves...Let's learn to respect it." – Reuben M. Koroma (Sierra Leone Refugee Allstars)
